The Scrap Book

TRULY GREAT

By William H. Davies

My walls outside must have some flowers,
My walls within must have some books;
A house that's small; a garden large,
And in it leafy nooks.

A little gold that's sure each week;
That comes not from my living kind,
But from a dead man in his grave,
Who cannot change his mind.

A lovely wife, and gentle, too;
Contented that no eyes but mine
Can see her many charms, nor voice
To call her beauty fine.

Where she would in that stone cage live,
A self-made prisoner, with me;
While many a wild bird sang around,
On gate, on bush, on tree.

And she sometimes to answer them,
In her far sweeter voice than all
Till birds, that loved to look on leaves,
Will doat on a stone wall.

With this small house, this garden large,
This little gold, this lovely mate,
With health in body, peace at heart—
Show me a man more great.

City Fright

Everybody who visits New York is seized at some time or other with a sense of panic at its immensity, no matter how well travel seasoned they have become. Practically every noted foreigner, from Dr. Albert Einstein to the youngest British flapper, yields at some time or other to this feeling.

People in country towns who may have kept away from the city because of their innate fear of the town ought to conquer this feeling and spend some time here. It is more than a liberal education.

No Real Danger

Life here is as safe as in any spot on earth, in spite of the monsters that roar in the subways, clatter on the elevated railroads and screech on the streets. That noise is what saves lives, probably. At the same time it is nerve-shaking to the stranger, from its potential menace.

Being lost in this enormous city is no great shakes. All one has to do is step up to some one of its 19,000 policemen and let him straighten out your mental tangle. Years ago they earned the name of "The Finest" and there is no reason to think of them as otherwise, even in these days of newspaper exposes.

Auto Tourists

Hardly an hour passes, day or night, that one cannot see an automobile carrying a load of farm folks out to see the sights of a great city, bowling along through the heart of Longacre Square—the focus of all this country's theatrical activities. Nothing is missing on most of these autos; the tent strapped on the running board; camp paraphernalia piled in, rusty old baggage, and dad up front in his shirt sleeves calmly moseying along past the friendly traffic cops; and mother in calico getting an eyeful while soothing her unruly brood.

Everybody they stop to ask for directions takes pleasure in helping them along and, even if they don't stay long in the city but hike right out to some tourist camp, they get to see the greatest show on earth at a minimum of expense and effort. It's a good stunt for anybody in the country who is wondering where to go for a vacation.

COMPLETE PLANS FOR MEETING HERE JULY 16

(By J. A. Barton, Co. Agent)

Thirty-five local leaders and officers of the following clubs, Lamkin, Beattie, Comyn, Downing, Hasse, Newburg, Robinson Springs Cross Roads, Cotton Grove, Sidney met Monday afternoon in County Agent's office and worked out plans for the Eighth Annual Summer 4-H Encampment which will be held at Lake Eanes, July 16 and 17th.

The general plans are to have the local leaders of each club to come along with the clubs, and are to have charge of the club affairs while at the camp. Each club is asked to be at the camp ground by 9:30 a. m. Thursday morning, July 16. It was decided by the local leaders and officers that only club members are to attend camp, except the night of the 16th when every one is invited to attend.

The club members are planning a big time for the night of the 16th. The first attraction after

AGED MAN IS ROBBED BY 2 UNMASKED MEN

Jim Evers, 82, was relieved of approximately $300.00 Saturday night about 9 o'clock when two unmasked men entered his residence near Taylor's Chapel according to a statement made by his daughter, Mrs. Frank Powers, to whose home at Soda Springs Mr. Evers walked as soon as the thieves left following the robbery.

According to Mrs. Powers, Mr. Evers, who lives alone was getting ready to retire and was busy making a pallet on the floor when the two men entered the residence. One of the men threw his hands over Mr. Evers' mouth and held him while the other took the money from his pockets. They then, according to Mr. Evers, rushed from the room and left on foot.

Mr. Evers in 1922 was robbed of a sum of money in a somewhat similar manner, it is said.

THREE ARE HURT IN CAR WRECK

Losing control of his car while coming down a hill three miles out of Comanche while enroute from Brownwood to Comanche, J. B. Hancock of Coleman, received severe bruises. his eleven year old son, J. B., Jr., suffered a broken arm, and Mrs. Hancock sustained injuries about the head and limbs when their car overturned twice and went into a ditch.

A passing motorist brought the injured parties into Comanche where they were treated by a physician.

Mr. Hancock resided for a time in Comanche where he worked as a driller on deep tests made here last year.

CIMARRON TO BE SHOWN ON SUN-MON-TUE.

In "Cimarron", which comes to the Ritz Theatre, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 12, 13 and 14, is truly an epoch in motion picture history.

It reveals Richard Dix in a new and startling role—that of Yancey Cravat, glamorous hero of the mighty Edna Ferber story. Given the greatest chance of his long and notable film career, Dix comes through with a characterization that will rank high among the best performances in the history of modern entertainment.

In Irene Dunne, Radio Pictures has made the most sensational discovery of the talkie age. Not only is her beauty and stage presence unsurpassable, but her acting is nothing less than inspired.

Sabra a Remarkable Role

We cannot compare her to Duse and Bernhardt, because neither of them ever enacted such a variegated role as that of the finely bred Sabra Cravat, who in her sixties becomes a tragic Lucy Stoner.

Rosco Ates exhibits a Chaplinesque sense of humor that evokes tears through gales of laughter—and vice versa; while George E. Stone after this will be considered among the foremost character actors.

In fact, every member of the cast of thirty-three artists is outstanding—Edna May Oliver, Nance O'Neil, William Collier, Jr., Stanley Fields, Eugene Jackson and a long list of others.

But the emotional relationship between Yancey and Sabra: It's like the beauty and power of a mighty mountain torrent which relegates mere spectacle, quaint realism and other story splendors to the background.

Never before has there been a love story as strange, or filled with as many cosmic thrills!

LEON BRIDGE IS NEAR COMPLETION

The last pile has been driven for the seventy five thousand dollar Leon Bridge on Highway No. 10 and the work is now two thirds finished according to Resident Engineer, J. G. Irby, who said Friday, that the bridge would be completed by September 1 at the present rate of construction.

Fifty one men and three teams were at work on the bridge Friday, all of the workmen with the exception of eight being local men.

The bridge is being made entirely of steel and concrete and when completed will be 1022 feet long with a roadway 22 feet wide. It is two feet in the clear above the highwater mark, and according to S. R .Ross, Foreman, is one of the best bridges he has ever helped build. Steam power shovels and trucks were used to build dirt and gravel grades at each end of the bridge giving all line level approaches for the structure.

Work was begun on the bridge April 15, the contract calling for its completion within 120 working days.

One other bridge on Highway No. 10 is practically completed and two others are under construction, and with the completion of these all high water streams on this Highway will be taken care of except the Paluxy in Erath County which is seldom a high water barrier.

Work is practically completed on the Pecan Bayou Bridges at Brownwood and the bridges on the Colorado at Winchell and the Brazos at Granbury have been contracted for.

While the Leon Bridge is not over so large a stream, it is among the longest of the bridges being built, due to the fact that the Leon bottom is so wide.

Especially good time has been made on the Leon Bridge in spite of the fact that one of the biggest rises in years delayed the work.

JULY 28, DATE ANNOUNCED FOR HIGHWAY FETE

An agreement has been reached between the entertainment committee of the Brownwood Chamber of Commerce and a delegation from Comanche to hold an inter-city celebration in Brownwood on Tuesday, July 28 to celebrate the completion of the new concrete highway from Brownwood to the Comanche county line.

Details of the program and entertainment have not been worked out and the only definite announcement is the date of the celebration. One of the Comanche representatives estimated that more than 2,000 Comanche county people would come to Brownwood over the new highway and Pecan Bayou bridge to attend the celebration.

Efforts are to be made to have W. R. Ely, chairman of the highway commission, here as one of the main speakers and other highway notables to be invited are A. F. Moursund, district engineer from San Angelo and also Mr. Dexter of the Dexter Construction Company, contractors for the highway.—Brownwood Bulletin.

WILD BARLEY YIELDS 30 BUSHELS

Barley growing wild as the grass made 30 bushels per acre on the E. H. Rauhut farm according to Mr. Rauhut who said he threshed that much from a ten acre patch of volunteer barley which had never been turned over or any other work done to the crop until harvesting time.

Mr. Rauhut said that he threshed 10,758 bushels for the best grain yield since he had been farming, making 4,900 bushels of oats, an average of 53 bushels per acre, 2,280 bushels of barley, an average of 57 bushels per acre, 2,210 bushels of mixed barley and oats, an average of 62 bushels and 1,380 bushels of wheat at an average of 34.5

MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED TAKE TOXOID THURS.

More than a hundred children were given diphtheria toxoid at the Comanche High School building Thursday morning under the direction of Miss Jean Dunnett, State Nurse, who was assisted by County Health Officer, Dr. J. O. Lane, Dr. I. T. Clemons and Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Osterhout.

The giving of diphtheria toxoid is the second step in the health program planned for the school children of Comanche, and is a part of the Drouth Relief Health Crusade being carried out in this section.

Miss Dunnett expressed herself as being very much gratified at the response to this preventative measure and was very complimentary of the work done by the local committee.

The second dose will be given Thursday morning, July 30, according to Mrs. C .E. Frost, Chairman of the local committee, who said later a typhoid vaccine would be given.

FINISH PAVING TO COMANCHE COUNTY LINE

At 11:45 o'clock Tuesday morning the final bucketful of concrete was poured on Highway No. 10 to complete the concrete ribbon from Main Street in Brownwood to the Comanche County line.

The paving machine finished its work and by 12 o'clock practically all finishing work had been completed and everything was in readiness for removal to Forney, Texas, where Dexter Construction Company will go to work on its next job.

Smoothing of the concrete and covering with canvas and dirt only remained over a short section in the city limits after lunch. The highway will be opened for traffic before July 28th when a celebration joined in by Brownwood and Comanche will be held here to celebrate the opening of the paving.—Brownwood Bulletin

ALSUP WILL SEEK BAIL

The John Alsup murder case, growing out of the killing of two negroes in the attempted robbery of the First State Bank of Polytechnic at Fort Worth on April 18, 1930, was transferred on change of venue Monday by Judge Hosey to Wichita Falls. The case probably will be tried there in September.

Otis Rogers, defense counsel, said he would file an application for writ of habeas corpus at Wichita Falls as soon as the transcript was received there. This will be to obtain Alsup's release on bond. He has been in jail since shortly after the killings.

Alsup, a former policeman, was given a 20-year sentence for the killing of Isaac (Will) Tate, but this was reversed and remanded by the Court of Criminal Appeals. A hung jury previously resulted. Alsup was acquitted in Dallas, where a second murder case was transferred. It was based on the killing of George Terrell, the other killed after he and Tate attempted to rob the Polytechnic bank.—Star Telegram.

STRUCK WHILE SLEEPING IN NARROW ROAD

Comanche furnished one of the 270 of the country's death toll on the National Independence Day when Paul Layne, 30, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Layne, was instantly killed about 4:30 Saturday afternoon near Ed Sumner's farm, eight miles southwest of Comanche when his head was crushed by the rear wheels of a truck driven by Dick Bagley of Sidney.

According to J. D. Bonner, Justice of the Peace, who with Sheriff Dwight Brightman and Deputy Turner Sanders went to the scene immediately following the tragedy, the accident was unavoidable on the part of Mr. Bagley, who ditched his truck in an effort to avoid running over Mr. Layne who apparently was asleep in the road in the shade of a tree.

The story of the accident as told to officers is that: About two o'clock in the afternoon, Paul came to Comanche and later went driving with James Davis, Pat Sandford and Mrs. Perrill Reiter, stopping at Blanket for some gasoline. They then headed back for Comanche on the new Highway No. 10 and upon reaching a point near the Sumner farm took the narrow road leading to the old Comanche and Blanket Highway. When a short distance up the road, Paul complained of feeling ill and got out of the car and lay down to rest in the road under a tree, the others driving a short distance further up the road.

A few minutes later, Dick Bagley, Bige Cox and Euell Ferguson, who had been hauling grain from a thresher at Sidney to Blanket came down the road Mr. Bagley who was driving said that he did not see Paul until within a few feet of him and that he then swerved the truck into the ditch, the front wheels missed him, but the rear wheels skidded and ran over the side of his head as the car went into the ditch.

Mr. Layne breathed a few times after Mr. Bagley and his companions reached him and they were almost immediately joined by the parties who had been driving with Paul. Officers and a physician were called immediately.

The body was brought to the Higginbotham undertaking parlor where it was prepared for burial and afterwards taken to the family residence three miles north of Comanche.

Funeral services were held at the Methodist Church Sunday afternoon at five o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. M. Perry, assisted by Revs. J. D. Smoot and Rev. Gordon Barrett. Pall bearers were

The chief reason why Sinclair Opaline Motor Oil stands up better is that it contains no petroleum jelly—that thick, salve-like substance used in many beauty ointments. If your motor oil drains from your crankcase thin and watery the trouble is probably petroleum jelly. ### Nature Thought of Everything

Nature thought of everything when the human body was made. When the body is about to become ill, nature planned danger signals to warn us. Thus, if our children grind their teeth when they sleep, or lack appetite, or suffer from abdominal pains, or itch about the nose and fingers, we should know that they may have contracted worms. Then, if we are wise, we buy a bottle of White's Cream Vermifuge and safely and surely expel the worms. Thus we avoid the danger of very serious trouble. White's Cream Vermifuge costs only 35c a bottle, and can be bought from

MACKEY—DONAHO

A nine year romance culminated in Port Arthur Thursday evening, July 3, when Miss Nita Donaho of Comanche and Frank Mackey of Colorado were married at the First Methodist Church of Port Arthur, the ceremony being performed by Rev. John Donaho, assistant pastor, and brother of the bride. Only a few relatives and friends, including, Mrs. Mackey's mother, Mrs. O. H. Donaho of Comanche attended the wedding.

Although the romance was of long standing, the wedding came as a surprise to most of the friends of the contracting parties. Mr. Mackey and Mrs. Donaho and her daughter left Comanche early Thursday morning for Port Arthur soon after the secret was revealed to the bride's parents with a request that the ceremoney be performed by her brother.

Immediately following their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Mackey left for a wedding trip and will return to Colorado the latter part of this week where they will make their home.

Both young people attended Comanche High School where they were active in student activities. Mr. Mackey attended Terrill School at Dallas and the Metroplitan Business College and Mrs. Mackey, Simmons University of Abilene where she specialized in music, and for the past year has been an assistant in that department.

Mr. Mackey is associated with his father and brother, Lloyd Mackey in the Colorado Motor Company.

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden—A story we have all heard since childhood—Consider your Adam's Apple—the possession of each one of us, man or woman—your voice box—containing your vocal chords—your larynx—Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants—Reach for a LUCKY instead—Be careful in your choice of cigarettes.

Remember, LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette in America that through its exclusive "TOASTING" Process expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are sold to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple."

COMANCHE CIRCUIT

Our revival meeting at Sidney is progressing nicely. Bro. Perry is bringing fine messages twice each day. The interest is increasing and in spite of the busy time we are having good attendance.

The meeting will continue throughout this week. If you have not been able to attend the first of the meeting, I trust you will be with us this week end.

The services held by the pastor each afternoon, in the homes of those who are not physically able to attend the meeting, promise to be of much value.

On account of being in the meeting at Sidney, I will not be at Harmony and White Point next Sunday.

Let every one remember that our Third Quarterly Meeting will convene at Proctor, Saturday, July the 18th.

Please let each member do your dead level best on the finance side of the church. You know what your church obligated themselves to do this year. If each member will make an honest effort there is no good reason why we should not redeem our past record. Your church is on trial. The world sees the church through you and me. It is our high privilege to so live and conduct our selves that others will want what you and I profess to have. We must, by our lives, create a desire in others to want to become a part of the Great Army of God.

In this connection, let me call your attention to a fundamental fact, namely, You cannot interest people in something that they do not want.

E. M. DAILY.

The Way of Life

By BRUCE BARTON

What Does It Matter?

LAST summer there was a water shortage in a town where I was visiting.

I happened to be chatting with my host, who is a noted man, while he was shaving, and I noticed how careful he was to use very little water.

"It seems sort of silly for you to be so conscientious," I remarked. "After all, the few drops that you conserve won't make any difference."

"They don't make any difference in the final result," he said, "but they make a lot of difference to me."

When he saw from my expression that I did not quite get his meaning, he proceeded to give me his philosophy of life.

He said that when he graduated from college, a quarter of a century ago, there was a great deal of popular emphasis upon so-called "social service."

Science had begun to introduce wonderful new inventions for increasing human happiness. Men were stirred by the hope of a quick millennium. Young people graduated with the notion that a few years of earnest effort would transform the world.

My friend was one of the most eager of the reformers. He organized, and voted, and agitated, and did all the things that he should. But nothing happened. The good candidates for whom he cast his vote were defeated. The good causes made slow progress. Human nature showed a discouraging unwillingness to change.

"I went through a period of deep disillusionment," he said. "I thought to myself, what's the use of doing anything when one's single effort seems so futile?

"One day while I was in this mood I discovered these words of Socrates:

'I, therefore, . . . consider how I may exhibit my soul before the judge in a healthy condition. Wherefore, disregarding the honors that most men value, and looking to the truth, I shall endeavor in reality to live as virtuously as I can; and when I die, to die so. And I invite all other men, to the utmost of my power; . . . to this contest, which, I affirm, surpasses all contests here.'

"That flashed across my mind like a bolt of lightning," my friend continued. "It clarified everything.

"I realized that I am not responsible for the success or failure of any good cause. All I am responsible for is my own best effort in that cause. Whether my vote be effective or not; whether the amount of water I can save will make any difference—these are not the questions.

"The only question is: Am I doing my best?

"That discovery gave me great comfort," he concluded. "Maybe you could use it in one of your editorials?"

"Many thanks," I answered. "I can."

Isham Family Holds Re-union

A re-union which drew a hundred people was held at Lake Eanes Sunday when the descendants of the late A. J. and S. A. Isham met at Lake Eanes.

According to Mrs. B. A. Howell of Gustine, secretary, there were 98 members of the family in addition to a number of friends present. Only nine of the immediate descendants were absent.

The first re-union was held at Lake Eanes two years ago and the second at Gustine last year. Lake Eanes was selected again for the meeting in 1932 and the date set for the first Sunday in July according to Mrs. Howell, who said that no deaths had occured since the last meeting and that there had been one birth, a daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. Oran Clarke of Coleman.

F. J. Isham was re-elected President and Mrs. B. A. Howell, secretary.

Children present with their families included C. W. Isham, Gustine; J. C. Isham, Newburg; Mrs. M. O. Coker, J. D. Isham, E. J. Isham, D. H. Isham, R. H. Isham, D. G. Isham, all of Comanche. Out of county visitors included Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Isham, Mrs. Less Miller and daughter, and Mr. Mrs. Nichols all of Fort Worth; Oran Clark and family and Andrew Isham and family of Coleman; L. J. Isham, Ernest Goodson and family and Otho Goodson of Haskell.

J. V. Carter and family spent the latter part of last week in Nocona with his daughter, Mrs. C. W. Cherry.

Can't Change Human Nature

By RUBY DOUGLAS

"HERBERT, I'm getting seriously discouraged about this help question," began Bert Brown's wife after a self-cooked dinner.

"If I could cook a meal like this dinner tonight I'd never need help," said Bert, complacently lighting his cigarette.

"That's all very well—once. But I'm not going to do it for life," retorted his wife.

"What was the matter with the last cook?"

"She's married."

"What shall we do about it, Grace?" he asked.

"We? I—you mean. What have you ever done about it?"

"Just what can I do about it, Grace? I come home on time to meals. I use the ash tray instead of the saucer—or the floor. I—"

"Don't be ridiculous, Bert."

"I'm trying to be helpful."

"Do you know what I think is the matter?" asked Grace.

Bert shook his head.

"We are too happy. They all think that if marriage is like this they must have a try at it."

Bert's face brightened with an idea. "Suppose we stage a quarrel every other Tuesday—or so!"

"I'm serious, Bert."

"Cheer up—get another one and leave it to me," said Bert.

"You speak as if they were picked off trees. But, I'll try."

Three nights later when Bert came home he found a new maid. Contrary to custom, he did not wait in the living room for Grace but stalked into the dining room and paraded up and down impatiently.

"Why—what's the matter, Bert?" asked his wife, joining him just as Sara, the maid, came in.

"Matter?" he growled. "Matter? You know very well I won't be kept waiting for meals."

Grace looked at her husband in utter astonishment. He was often cross and tired but always gentle—never like this. Then it occurred to her. But—she did not like him to carry a joking suggestion to this length.

Dinner was dreadful. The maid viewed her from the corner of her eye and seemed deeply sorry for her. Bert was relentless.

The maid brought the coffee.

"Grace," began Bert immediately, "how often do I remind you that I like my coffee by the fire?"

Grace glared at him. "Sara, I forgot to tell you that we have coffee inside. Put it on the small table beside the couch and touch a match to the fire on the hearth."

Meantime, Bert had gone into the living room and was lighting the fire himself.

They waited in silence until Sara had placed the tray nervously on the end table under the lamp.

"Bert—Bert—" sobbed Grace.

The man growled something under his breath.

"You are carrying this too far!"

"Are you sure she's gone?" he asked, gently.

"Of course she has, and I'd like to know her opinion of you!"

And there followed an hour of reconciliation in the glow of the fire.

For weeks the new maid stayed on and proved to be all that the household needed. She was well enough spoken not to be a menace to the sensitive infantile ear of baby. She did not seem to have a beau. She did not mind the grumpy master. And she adored Grace.

One morning Sara seemed to have something on her mind.

"I—I have a confession to make, Mrs. Brown—" she began.

"What is it, Sara? I'm sure it can't be anything very reprehensible."

"But it is," insisted Sara. "It was the first night I was here. I—I did something I had never done before. It—it has changed my whole life."

"Yes?" said Grace, kindly.

"I—I eavesdropped when you and Mr. Brown were making up after the mean way he had treated you at dinner. I was fully expecting a fight and had made up my mind to leave. It was because of a quarrel with my own young man that I was here at all. We were to have been married but we had such a scrap that I knew we couldn't be happy, and I went back to work. I saw you two—how mean he was to you and how grand it was to make up and decided that maybe Frank and I could do the same. If folks like you and Mr. Brown could fight and be happy—why couldn't we? I never would have spoken to Frank again nor promised to marry him if—if I hadn't seen you and Mr. Brown making up that night. I—"

"Yes—yes, Sara," Grace said, beginning to sense the outcome.

"And so—we're going to be married next month."

Grace was as sympathetic as she could be but when the girl had gone she sat down and cried.

"To go through all this and find yourself in the same boat as before."

"It simply resolves itself into the fact that you can't change human nature," said Bert when she had told him all. "You women will have us men no matter what we do!"

New Star in the Flag

If Alaska were to become a state new star would be added to national banner on the following Fourth of July. Congress approved an act on April 4, 1818, which provides in part, "That on the admission of every new state into the Union, one star be added to the union of the flag and that such addition shall take effect on the fourth day of July next succeeding such admission."

The Way of Life by BRUCE BARTON

SUNKEN PILLARS

I WENT to a function where a brilliant young man received a distinguished honor. Fine speeches about him were made, and the mayor of the city presented a gold medal.

Back near the door sat a demure old couple who seemed ill at ease. Their faces were lined; their hands showed the marks of hard labor. They alone of all the guests did not wear evening clothes.

But when the young man came down from the platform he strode quickly across the room and, reaching the old couple, put his arms around them.

The audience cheered.

I thought of Thomas Carlyle who, when fame came to him, looked backed from the fashionable society of London to the rugged farm where he had grown up, and the humble parents whose self-sacrifice had made his career possible. Said he:

"I feel to my father, so great though so neglected, so generous always towards me, a strange tenderness peculiar to the case, infinitely soft and near my heart. Was he not a sacrifice to me?"

And he added: "I can see his life in some measure as the sunken pillar on which mine was to be built. Had I stood in his place, could he not have stood in mine and more?"

I thought of the father of Robert Burns and the "pains he took to get proper schooling for his boys, and when that was no longer possible, the sense and resolution with which he set himself to supply the deficiency by his own influence. For many years he was their chief companion; he spoke to them seriously on all subjects as if they were grown men; at night, when work was over, he taught them arithmetic; he borrowed books for them on history, science, and theology . . . He would go to his daughter as she stayed afield herding cattle, to teach her the names of the grasses and wild flowers, or to sit by her side when it thundered."

I thought of the father of John Stuart Mill, neglecting his own interests in order to work patiently at the education of his boy; of Thomas Lincoln, struggling to keep his poverty-stricken family together—of all the uncounted hosts of hidden fathers . . . "sunken pillars" . . . who suffered oblivion cheerfully in order that their sons might rise.

It would be fairer if every life could be measured by a double standard—first, by its own achievement; second, by the careers of its children. On this basis many obscure lives become glorious.

And many a medal, placed in the strong, achieving hands of brilliant youth, should be passed back to the gnarled hands of the little old couple sitting shyly by the door.

Ford Show Is Well Attended

More than six hundred people attended the first of a two days performance of the Ford Show at Comanche Wednesday and good crowds were present throughout the whole show according to Hart Shoemaker of the Comanche Motor Company who expressed gratification for the interest in the show.

The program included motion pictures of the Ford Plant at Detroit and a complete demonstration of the different models under the direction of A. W. Jaeger who is in charge of the show, and a display of the Ford parts.

A cut-away chasis, with blocks sawed out by fifteen year old students of the Ford Industrial School at Detroit, showed the workings of all the mechanical parts of the car and attracted the most attention of spectators according to H. R. Jones who said the crowd seemed unusually interested in this demonstration.

The show was brought to Comanche from Gatesville and had been previously shown at Hamilton and Brownwood and left Friday morning for Cleburne after which it will be shown in East Texas, according to Mr. Shoemaker who said that he considered it a compliment to Comanche that this city should be selected as one of the few places for an exhibition in West Texas at this time.

What Does It Matter?

LAST summer there was a water shortage in a town where I was visiting.

I happened to be chatting with my host, who is a noted man, while he was shaving, and I noticed how careful he was to use very little water.

"It seems sort of silly for you to be so conscientious," I remarked. "After all, the few drops that you conserve won't make any difference."

"They don't make any difference in the final result," he said, "but they make a lot of difference to me."

When he saw from my expression that I did not quite get his meaning, he proceeded to give me his philosophy of life.

He said that when he graduated from college, a quarter of a century ago, there was a great deal of popular emphasis upon so-called "social service."

Science had begun to introduce wonderful new inventions for increasing human happiness. Men were stirred by the hope of a quick millennium. Young people graduated with the notion that a few years of earnest effort would transform the world.

My friend was one of the most eager of the reformers. He organized, and voted, and agitated, and did all the things that he should. But nothing happened. The good candidates for whom he cast his vote were defeated. The good causes made slow progress. Human nature showed a discouraging unwillingness to change.

"I went through a period of deep disillusionment," he said. "I thought to myself, what's the use of doing anything when one's single effort seems so futile?

"One day while I was in this mood I discovered these words of Socrates:

'I, therefore, . . . consider how I may exhibit my soul before the judge in a healthy condition. Wherefore, disregarding the honors that most men value, and looking to the truth, I shall endeavor in reality to live as virtuously as I can; and when I die, to die so. And I invite all other men, to the utmost of my power; . . . to this contest, which, I affirm, surpasses all contests here.'

"That flashed across my mind like a bolt of lightning," my friend continued. "It clarified everything.

"I realized that I am not responsible for the success or failure of any good cause. All I am responsible for is my own best effort in that cause. Whether my vote be effective or not; whether the amount of water I can save will make any difference—these are not the questions.

"The only question is: Am I doing my best?

"That discovery gave me great comfort," he concluded. "Maybe you could use it in one of your editorials?"

"Many thanks," I answered. "I can."

Can't Change Human Nature

By RUBY DOUGLAS

"HERBERT, I'm getting seriously discouraged about this help question," began Bert Brown's wife after a self-cooked dinner.

"If I could cook a meal like this dinner tonight I'd never need help," said Bert, complacently lighting his cigarette.

"That's all very well—once. But I'm not going to do it for life," retorted his wife.

"What was the matter with the last cook?"

"She's married."

"What shall we do about it, Grace?" he asked.

"We? I—you mean. What have you ever done about it?"

"Just what can I do about it, Grace? I come home on time to meals. I use the ash tray instead of the saucer—or the floor. I—"

"Don't be ridiculous, Bert."

"I'm trying to be helpful."

"Do you know what I think is the matter?" asked Grace.

Bert shook his head.

"We are too happy. They all think that if marriage is like this they must have a try at it."

Bert's face brightened with an idea. "Suppose we stage a quarrel every other Tuesday—or so!"

"I'm serious, Bert."

"Cheer up—get another one and save it to me," said Bert.

"You speak as if they were picked off trees. But, I'll try."

Three nights later when Bert came home he found a new maid. Contrary to custom, he did not wait in the living room for Grace but stalked into the dining room and paraded up and down impatiently.

"Why—what's the matter, Bert?" asked his wife, joining him just as Sara, the maid, came in.

"Matter?" he growled. "Matter? You know very well I won't be kept waiting for meals."

Grace looked at her husband in utter astonishment. He was often cross and tired but always gentle—never like this. Then it occurred to her. But—she did not like him to carry a joking suggestion to this length.

Dinner was dreadful. The maid viewed her from the corner of her eye and seemed deeply sorry for her. Bert was relentless.

The maid brought the coffee.

"Grace," began Bert immediately, "how often do I remind you that I like my coffee by the fire?"

Grace glared at him. "Sara, I forgot to tell you that we have coffee inside. Put it on the small table beside the couch and touch a match to the fire on the hearth."

Meantime, Bert had gone into the living room and was lighting the fire himself.

They waited in silence until Sara had placed the tray nervously on the end table under the lamp.

"Bert—Bert—" sobbed Grace.

The man growled something under his breath.

"You are carrying this too far!"

"Are you sure she's gone?" he asked, gently.

"Of course she has, and I'd like to know her opinion of you!"

And there followed an hour of reconciliation in the glow of the fire.

For weeks the new maid stayed on and proved to be all that the household needed. She was well enough spoken not to be a menace to the sensitive infantile ear of baby. She did not seem to have a beau. She did not mind the grumpy master. And she adored Grace.

One morning Sara seemed to have something on her mind.

"I—I have a confession to make, Mrs. Brown—" she began.

"What is it, Sara? I'm sure it can't be anything very reprehensible."

"But it is," insisted Sara. "It was the first night I was here. I—I did something I had never done before. It—it has changed my whole life."

"Yes?" said Grace, kindly.

"I—I eavesdropped when you and Mr. Brown were making up after the mean way he had treated you at dinner. I was fully expecting a fight and had made up my mind to leave. It was because of a quarrel with my own young man that I was here at all. We were to have been married but we had such a scrap that I knew we couldn't be happy, and I went back to work. I saw you two—how mean he was to you and how grand it was to make up and decided that maybe Frank and I could do the same. If folks like you and Mr. Brown could fight and be happy—why couldn't we? I never would have spoken to Frank again nor promised to marry him if—if I hadn't seen you and Mr. Brown making up that night. I—"

"Yes—yes, Sara," Grace said, beginning to sense the outcome.

"And so—we're going to be married next month."

Grace was as sympathetic as she could be but when the girl had gone she sat down and cried.

"To go through all this and find yourself in the same boat as before."

"It simply resolves itself into the fact that you can't change human nature," said Bert when she had told him all. "You women will have us men no matter what we do!"

The Way of Life
by BRUCE BARTON

SUNKEN PILLARS

I WENT to a function where a brilliant young man received a distinguished honor. Fine speeches about him were made, and the mayor of the city presented a gold medal.

Back near the door sat a demure old couple who seemed ill at ease. Their faces were lined; their hands showed the marks of hard labor. They alone of all the guests did not wear evening clothes.

But when the young man came down from the platform he strode quickly across the room and, reaching the old couple, put his arms around them.

The audience cheered.

I thought of Thomas Carlyle who, when fame came to him, looked backed from the fashionable society of London to the rugged farm where he had grown up, and the humble parents whose self-sacrifice had made his career possible. Said he:

"I feel to my father, so great though so neglected, so generous always towards me, a strange tenderness peculiar to the case, infinitely soft and near my heart. Was he not a sacrifice to me?"

And he added: "I can see his life in some measure as the sunken pillar on which mine was to be built. Had I stood in his place, could he not have stood in mine and more?"

I thought of the father of Robert Burns and the "pains he took to get proper schooling for his boys, and when that was no longer possible, the sense and resolution with which he set himself to supply the deficiency by his own influence. For many years he was their chief companion; he spoke to them seriously on all subjects as if they were grown men; at night, when work was over, he taught them arithmetic; he borrowed books for them on history, science, and theology . . . He would go to his daughter as she stayed afield herding cattle, to teach her the names of the grasses and wild flowers, or to sit by her side when it thundered."

I thought of the father of John Stuart Mill, neglecting his own interests in order to work patiently at the education of his boy; of Thomas Lincoln, struggling to keep his poverty-stricken family together—of all the uncounted hosts of hidden fathers . . . "sunken pillars" . . . who suffered oblivion cheerfully in order that their sons might rise.

It would be fairer if every life could be measured by a double standard—first, by its own achievement; second, by the careers of its children. On this basis many obscure lives become glorious.

And many a medal, placed in the strong, achieving hands of brilliant youth, should be passed back to the gnarled hands of the little old couple sitting shyly by the door.

Ford Show Is Well Attended

More than six hundred people attended the first of a two days performance of the Ford Show at Comanche Wednesday and good crowds were present throughout the whole show according to Hart Shoemaker of the Comanche Motor Company who expressed gratification for the interest in the show.

The program included motion pictures of the Ford Plant at Detroit and a complete demonstration of the different models under the direction of A. W. Jaeger who is in charge of the show, and a display of the Ford parts.

A cut-away chasis, with blocks sawed out by fifteen year old students of the Ford Industrial School at Detroit, showed the workings of all the mechanical parts of the car and attracted the most attention of spectators according to H. R. Jones who said the crowd seemed unusually interested in this demonstration.

The show was brought to Comanche from Gatesville and had been previously shown at Hamilton and Brownwood and left Friday morning for Cleburne after which it will be shown in East Texas, according to Mr. Shoemaker who said that he considered it a compliment to Comanche that this city should be selected as one of the few places for an exhibition in West Texas at this time.

WHEN you set out to buy tires, don't you really want the most miles and the utmost in safety at the lowest possible price.

That being your objective, which tire should you buy?

If the experience of 20,000,000 motorists means anything, you should certainly buy Goodyears.

But if you try to puzzle through the welter of statistics on thicknesses, weights and diameters you lose the main issue and are as much at sea as ever.

The one and only reliable guide for you to follow is the seasoned preference of the public.

And that preference is overwhelmingly for Goodyear.

This fact expressed year after year by Goodyear's great leadership is concretely told again in the findings of an impartial investigation made by an unbiased dependable institution that asked 205,000 car owners this simple question:

QUESTION: "Regardless of price, convenience, etc., what make of tire do you consider the BEST tire made?"

There's the only buying guide that means anything to you car owners.

Nine-Tenths Preventable

Nine-tenths of all the diseases of the American people can be traced directly to constipation, doctors say. Constipation throws into the system poisons which taint and weaken every organ of the body and make them easy victims for any germs which attack them. Prevent constipation and you will avoid nine-tenths of all diseases, with their consequent pain and financial losses. Herbine, the good old vegetable cathartic, will relieve constipation in a natural, easy and pleasant way. For sale by

Too Much ACID

MANY people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any druggists. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company since 1875. 58

Billy Fink is pouring out a drink for Evelyn Jungles. They are the healthiest boy and girl in Cook County.

MRS. GORE HURT IN EXPLOSION

Mrs. J. W. Gore, 904 Fisk Avenue, Brownwood, was a victim of a mysterious explosion in the yard of her home Thursday morning, July 2, at 8:00 o'clock and fine pieces of metal which flew from the trash pile made innumerable wounds on her body, according to attending physicians.

The cause of the explosion is a mystery and county officers are still investigating. The trash pile had been raked up the afternoon before and Mrs. Gore had lighted the trash to burn it Thursday morning. She was bending over the pile when the explosion was heard for some distance.

Police say it is thought that there was probably a shot gun shell cap in a tin can in the pile and when the shell became heated it exploded and burst the can into thousands of small pieces.

The most serious wound is in the abdomen. The other wounds were filled with ashes and other derbis from the trash pile and with clothing, the doctors stated.

The explosion did not knock Mrs. Gore off her feet and she walked into her house and then walked to the car which carried her to the hospital. The wounds bled profusely.—Brownwood Bulletin.

Mrs. Gore formerly lived in Comanche.

From all reports the club meet will be the greatest ever held and the best, for there will be more doing, why not? with swimming, baseball, stunts, songs, yells water races, free Picture Show by Mr. W. ## Evelyn of Ye Flower Shop

By BLANCHE NAYLOR

EVELYN BURT tied a big bow of yellow tulle on the handle of a basket of blue larkspur and placed it in the window of Ye Flower Shoppe. As she did so, she looked straight into the eyes of Glenn Mowbray, who was admiring the picture she made with her yellow hair and Alice blue gown and the basket in her hand.

Caught red-handed in the act Mowbray had the grace to enter and purchase the blossoms included in his stare.

"What name, please?" asked Evelyn in her best business manner, although her cheeks were pink from the bold admiration in the face of the stranger.

"Oh, Spring, or Flora, or Raphael's Flower Girl, any would be appropriate," he offered.

"I beg your pardon, to whom do you wish the basket sent?"

"Oh, send it to the hospital or to a sick friend or anyone you wish. I just bought it because it was a part of a beautiful picture," Glenn Mowbray declared.

"Your card?" Evelyn inquired.

"Anonymous," he smiled, "although my name is Glenn Mowbray. Is yours by any chance Juno or Helen or Clytie?"

Evelyn ignored the question.

"Five dollars," she murmured.

"And cheap at the price," he rejoined, placing the bill in her outstretched hand.

Glenn Mowbray was no laggard in love. It became his habit to drive by at closing time and take Evelyn home in his roadster.

Evelyn was so thrilled by his attentions that Bob Van Sant, who had been her cavalier since high school days, seemed dull and prosy in comparison, and his honest blue eyes and curly brown hair commonplace and lacking the style of Glenn's sleekly bandolined head and jaunty self-possession; and Bob's nondescript little car looked particularly shabby beside Glenn's luxurious imported eight-cylinder sports runabout; and Bob's best blue serge was more shiny than ever compared with Glenn's nifty London tweeds.

Glenn was never serious for a moment but his conversation was interlarded with pet names and phrases and Evelyn felt so like a princess in a fairy tale when she rode beside him that she never noticed his lovemaking was all in the present tense.

Then, he rode away, and for a week Evelyn haunted the postman's steps; but no letter.

"Listen, Evelyn," pleaded faithful Bob, who was once again at his post as escort, "there's the finest little bungalow out in Windemere Heights that can be bought for a song."

"Yes, and you'll do the singing to the tune of a dollar down and a dollar a day the rest of your natural life," Evelyn rejoined captiously. "Besides, who wants to live in Windemere Heights?"

"Well, I hoped that you might some day," Bob answered, "and I could buy it now and begin paying on it and then when I get my raise we could be married."

"Well-ll, I'm not going to marry and live on in the sticks," Evelyn replied airily. "The bright lights for me, every time."

Then one day Glenn Mowbray's face and that of a girl looked out of the pages of a metropolitan daily and Evelyn read the announcement of his approaching marriage.

"I'll show him," she whispered to herself.

Bob was still persistent, so by degrees Evelyn allowed herself to be persuaded that Windemere Heights was not so bad, after all. All places would look alike anyway after Glenn Mowbray was married and had sailed with his bride to Europe, as the newspaper story said he would.

As she hemmed the blue and white towels and ruffled the dainty curtains that were meant for the house in Windemere Heights, Evelyn tried to keep out of her mind the lurking thoughts of Glenn. And as the ruffles showed themselves perkly and complete, this became easier, and strangely enough, Bob and the little house and the shabby car and the shiny suit became as much her own, and with the same quality of preciousness, as the knick-knacks she created with her own fingers.

The last day that Evelyn was to be in Ye Flower Shoppe finally came. Tomorrow she and Bob would be married and begin the honeymoon and the rest of their life toegther in the little bungalow with the rose trellis over the door.

A basket of blue larkspur was ready for the window and as Evelyn tied the bow on the handle she thought of that day last May when she had looked into the eyes of Glenn Mowbray. Then some one entered the door—and there he was in the flesh. Still handsome, still debonair, but as Evelyn looked at the little wrinkles around his eyes and the loose lines of self-indulgence about his mouth and thought of Bob, dear old Bob, so strong and true, so sturdy and dependable, she almost laughed at the bogy she had feared.

"Ah, beautiful Flora, still blushing unseen and wasting your sweetness upon ineligible bachelors?" asked Mowbray flippantly.

"Not after today," answered Evelyn fervently. "Tomorrow and ever after belongs to the man I love."

Etiquette of the Road

Courtesy is not dead. It is just developing slight changes. Nowadays when a lady driver meets you on a highway it is customary to have your hub cap removed. Consequently, giving a woman driver the right of way sometimes shows more prudence than chivalry.—Pathfinder Magazine.

More About "CIMARRON"

kept faith with the original author. "Cimarron" on the screen, if any thing, flatters the novel and the characters. It is bigger and finer in every way.

"Cimarron" is the story of early Indian territory life and the Oklahoma land rushes. The story depicts the passing of "America's last frontier," the evolution of a new country from 1889 to 1930; the social revolution of the five civilized tribes of Indians; the magic discovery of oil that enriched the Osage; and the emotional relationship between Yancey Cravat, picturesque but improvident attorney-editor and his finely bred, southern wife, Sabra. These two roles are played by Dix and Miss Dunne.

Many of the scenes were filmed in Oklahoma. Others were made at the ranch, oil fields near Venice, Cal., and near Inglewood, Cal. At the latter place the dynamic land rushes were staged. Five thousand "extras" and 3500 horses and mules were used during the three days required to photograph this highlight.

The scenes were photographed from the air, moving trucks, stationary and buried cameras—thirty in number.

Indian Gap To Get Mail From Comanche

Indian Gap will have direct mail connection with Comanche after July 16 when Indian Gap Route 1 will be consolidated with Comanche Route 5 according to a message received from the Postmaster General's Department to the local Post Office.

The consolidation of the two routes will give Indian Gap patrons mail an hour earlier each day and will save them from twelve to twenty four hours in dispatching mail. Letters mailed at Indian Gap in the morning will now reach Comanche in time to be carried to Fort Worth and points east on the 2 p. m. mail truck.

The new route which is carried by George S. Clarke will be 63.4 miles in length, one of the longest in this part of the State. Mr. Clarke will leave Comanche daily except Sunday at eight a. m. and return by 1:30 p. m. There will be no change in Comanche Route 5 or in Indian Gap Route 1 and every box that was now being served by the two routes would be served by Mr. Clarke after the consolidation.

Mr. Clarke has been carried out of Comanche since 1921 beginning at that time with Comanche Route 6, then a short route which about three years ago was extended into Priddy. When Comanche Route 3 and 5 were consolidated a few months ago, Mr. Clarke's route remained the same, but the number was changed from 6 to 5.

A vacancy occured at Indian Gap a few months ago when Mr. Beedles, veteran Indian Gap carrier retired.

Most people assume that the normal mark on a fever thermometer, namely 98.6 degress, is normal for everyone. This is not true. It is normal for the average person. There are many exceptions.

If you take a record of the temperature of the members of your family during normal health, you will frequently find that there is a wide variation from the normal temperature indicated on your thermometor.

Fever is usually the first sign of illness, and invariably should be reported to your family physician. A good fever thermometer in the home may cut short what otherwise might be a long and serious spell of illness.

Consult your family doctor and send your Prescriptions to us for prompt, efficient service.
